WHEREAS, The members of the Association of Independent Colleges and Schools (AICS) and the members of the National Business Education Association are performing the vital function of securing this country's future growth and development through building a strong business education component; and,

WHEREAS, According to recent Labor Department statistics, the vast majority of the 46 million job openings between 1976 and 1985 will require specialized career training. Bookkeepers, stenographers, laboratory technicians, specialists in marketing and merchandising, computer programmers and operators, and other well-trained persons are becoming ever more important to the sustenance and growth of the free enterprise system; and

WHEREAS, Proper emphasis should be placed on the education of these individuals, attention should be drawn to the contribution business schools and colleges make to the community, and students, teachers, parents, business people and government officials need be reminded that the demand for trained workers exceeds the supply; and

WHEREAS, The National Education for Business Week has three purposes:

1. To focus attention on the shortage of workers whose practical skills are basic to the future of business;

2. To provide business educators with the recognition they deserve for the support they provide; and

3. To stimulate interest among young people in vocations and careers that have promising futures in the world of business:

NOW, THEREFORE, I, WILLIAM J. JANKLOW, Governor of the State of South Dakota, do hereby proclaim the week of April 16-22, 1979, as

and alert the citizens of South Dakota to the increasing problem of not having enough well-trained, qualified people to fill the jobs available in business, industry, health care occupations and elsewhere, and urge you to become aware of the educational means in South Dakota by which we can develop our under-utilized potential.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused to be affixed the Great Seal of the State of South Dakota, in Pierre, the Capital City, this First Day of March, in the Year of Our Lord, Nineteen Hundred and Seventy-Nine
